I'm gonna miss you so much man, there's no way to even describe the emptiness that fills me. You were not technically my twin, but it felt like having one and I will always remember my times with you over the last 14 years. I remember when we used to play on our Wii U and I would toss you into the lava while we played the Mario game, or when I got mad at you when we were little and told you were treating me like a hotdog, or when you'd play Fortnite on my PlayStation and scream any time someone ran up on you. The list goes on, the birthdays, our talks, our typical sibling stares, you speed walking home when I took too long talking to my friends, when I got tired of going to strike zone because you took forever with your makeup, your stubbornness, your side eyes, your everything man. When we took those snow pictures, you did me wrong angles and all but I got you right, that was a fun day. When we would walk to Tom Thumb together or you would pick up coins from my room because you knew I wasn't going to use them. I could go on and on all day about you Anaia, it's stuff I can't get back. I wished I cherished them more, but people always think they cherish them until it's over. You never cherish enough, and at the end of the day, my partial closure comes from knowing that we always had each other. Even if all we did before you passed was stare at each other and you told me to cut my TV down as our last text conversation, until the end of time, I am your older brother, and you are my little sister. You always will be, I will always care for you and will never forget what you did for him in my life, just be living and being a part of it. It's a bond that could never be replaced, and when I heard that you called me your best friend to a few people, I meant way more to you than I thought. It sucks it has to be this way and that I even have to write this, but it'll forever be Christian and Anaia, Anaia, and Christian, as it always has been. Although you aren't here, you'll forever live within me. Now I know you are safe, and you don't have things to worry about anymore like your next hair appointment or how you would get all your grades up in under three days. At the end of the day, it was always us and if everyone had fallen off the face of the planet, it'd still be us. My closure from your passing comes from knowing that although all we did was stare before you passed, you and I had something that could never be broken, even when I see you one day, it'll still be the same. I'll have stories for you that you'll laugh at when my time comes, which I hope is far from now. You didn't need to tell me anything that I already didn't know, me and you were tight for life, and as my only sibling, you were the best I could've ever asked for. Obviously, I had no say in that, but I'm glad it was just us. You will always be my sister, I'll never forget you Anaia, I'll be strong I know you wouldn't want me changing what you liked about me just because of this. So I'm sticking to what you loved about me. I love you, and have good luck in wherever the wind takes you. I know you'll love it up there more than anything else. Save me a spot, I'll be looking for you, and I'll see you when I get there and I'll make it my mission to see you again. Sister, stay happy, because I know you will be. I love you so much and I don't even wanna stop typing but this is getting really long. 14 years of nothing but sibling love and banter, something I will always cherish, and something that'll continue until the end of time. March 17th will always be your day, and say hello to everyone who passed before you and I know you've already seen them.- From your forever brother, Christian Smith.

Not a minute goes by where I'm not thinking about you, I'm still in such shock that this even happened I have no words. I loved you so much Anaia I never knew how much losing you and not hearing your voice or laugh would affect me, everywhere I go in school I replay our memories in my mind and think of all the great times we had together. You were always by my side in middle school and in high school, we would walk everywhere together and now I walk alone to our classes. I hate walking in school without you, it just seems so wrong, and it really is. You were only 14, you had sooo many more years to live your life and it just sucks you didn't get the chance to do that. Words cant even express how much I loved you and how much you really meant to me. It really breaks my heart that your gone and that our last few conversations were in arguments and ill forever live with that regret, but it teaches me a lesson to never take the people I love for granted because you could lose them in a second. I'm so sorry for your family, I know this took a HUGE toll on everyone. It was the last thing anyone would've expected. I never would've thought that I would lose my best friend, it still hasn't even sank in that you're really gone. I'm in such denial I don't even wanna believe for a second that this is really truly happening because once I do I know the pain will never stop. I'm gonna miss you so bad Anaia you really truly meant the whole world to me and I'll never forget you. I'll always keep ten toes down for you and make sure your memory stays alive. Always and forever in my heart my little angel baby. I love you forever, until we meet again Anaia.
